OILFIELD BASICS ADDS TO ITS COURSE CATALOGUE

ALLENTOWN, Pennsylvania – (September 23, 2020) – American Energy Partners, Inc. (“American Energy”) (PINK: AEPT), a diversified energy company, is excited to announce that its wholly owned subsidiary Oilfield Basics is expanding its online course catalogue again. The newest addition, entitled “International Completion Operations & Fluids” is authored by Roshan Patelia. This new course complements our existing “Basics of Frac Chemistry” course. International Completion Operations & Fluids is now available for purchase on our site. View the course details, outline, sample lesson(s), author bio, and purchase it here: View our Courses.

This one-hour long video course entitled “International Completion Operations & Fluids” covers completion fluid types, selection, preparation and testing. This course also familiarizes students with parameters involved while completing a well. Patelia also reviews various casing cleanout tools, the process of lowering of various tools in the well, and how wells are prepared for the completion process.

Mr. Roshan Patelia earned his bachelor’s in petroleum engineering from Pandit Deendayal Petroleum University (PDPU) in Gandhinagar, India. Mr. Patelia worked as a Drilling & Completion Fluids Engineer at Halliburton. He also worked for the London based oil & gas market intelligence company Petrowatch.

Patelia had this to say regarding his course and experience with Oilfield Basics, “This introductory course is for anyone who would like to get a basic understanding of completion operations in the oilfield & the role of fluids in the completion process... Special thanks to Oilfield Basics which gave me this opportunity. It’s a wonderful platform to explore, especially for anyone who wants to learn various topics relating to petroleum engineering. I highly recommend it to any student with a curiosity to excel in the oil & gas industry, especially their podcasts.”
